

Mayor Daryl Sexton, Yarrabah Aboriginal Shire Council

Mayor Daryl Sexton began working with Yarrabah Aboriginal Shire Council in 1995 at just 17 years of age, starting as an apprentice plumber. He completed his apprenticeship and became a qualified Plumber and Drainer in 1999.

Over the years, Mayor Sexton has worked across Council, including in housing and community-focused roles, giving him strong, practical insight into the everyday needs of local families. He has also worked as a Supervisor under Work for Queensland and as a Social and Emotional Wellbeing (SEWB) Men's Health Officer with Gurriny Yealamucka Health Service, supporting men's wellbeing and strengthening families in Yarrabah.

Employment and housing are Mayor Sexton's key priorities and areas of passion. He believes that creating real job opportunities and strong housing outcomes is essential to building a healthy, resilient community.

Mayor Sexton is committed to serving the Yarrabah community and working alongside residents to build a better future — one where everyone can move forward together and benefit equally through shared responsibility, respect, and connection.
